Project Summary

Funded by a Quadricentennial Legacy Grant from the CVNHP/LCBP the “Exploring 9,000 years of Human History at Chimney Point,” project was a collaboration between the University of Vermont Consulting Archaeology Program (UVM CAP) and the Vermont Division for Historic Preservation (VDHP). As a result of the project, an interactive touch screen system was installed at the Chimney Point Historic Site, Vermont. The system is operated and maintained by the VDHP and provides public access to exciting historical and archaeological research and interpretation of Chimney Point’s human history and archaeological resources. The technologically sophisticated system represents a major upgrade to existing exhibits helping to educate visitors and emphasize the significance of the archaeological and historical cultural resources at Chimney Point, Vermont.

Visitors learn of ancient peoples with new technology
